ABSTRACT

To encourage creativity and artistic expression among youth, provide a platform for talent recognition, enhance member engagement, and promote leadership and teamwork through a well-organized art competition.

PROJECT NEED ASSESSMENT

Benefiting Community	The benefiting community of the PICCASO Art Competition was the student community of Richmond College, with a special focus on young artists and creative-minded students. Students demonstrated their artistic abilities through their original work which helped them develop their self-assurance. The competition fostered positive social interaction between participants who engaged in friendly competition while showing their appreciation for art and developing their Leo values. The school community outside the production team gained knowledge about creative activities and teamwork and leadership skills which brought students together to build stronger institutional bonds.
Identified Community Need	There was a lack of accessible platforms for the creative expression of the students' artistic talents. The majority of the students have artistic skills that are inadequately utilized. The project will fill the gap as it provides an enabling environment for the creative expression of the students' artistic talents.
Service Opportunity	The Leo membership offered individuals the opportunity to serve by planning, organizing, coordinating, and judging an arts competition that promotes youth creativity. The opportunity enabled the members to equip themselves with the skills of managing events while taking part in the personal development of young artistic individuals.
Mode of Data Collection	Participant registrations, submitted artworks, judges' evaluations, and feedback received from participants and organizers were used to assess participation and project outcomes.
