01. About the Project

01) Project Objective

To provide warm, nutritious meals to homeless individuals in Galle and Matara, ensuring immediate relief for those in need.

To promote compassion and community responsibility among youth by engaging volunteers in meaningful, hands-on service.

02) Project Description

❖ Community Need / Requirement:

Homeless individuals in Galle and Matara towns often lack access to warm, nutritious meals. Recognizing this need, the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College, in collaboration with the Leo Club of Rahula College, aimed to provide immediate relief and support to those living on the streets

❖ Project Selection / Idea Generation:

The idea for Path of Harvest was initiated by the Leo Club of Rahula College. Our club joined hands with them to expand the reach and impact of the project. The initiative was simple yet meaningful, members would volunteer to provide meals for distribution to those in need.

❖ Planning and Execution:

Members from the Centennial Leo Club donated packets of rice and curry each. All packets were brought to a central meeting point in Galle city, where the club members gathered and then spread out across streets, bus stands, marketplaces, and other common areas to distribute the meals. The planning process was straightforward: gather contributions, and ensure each packet reached someone in need.

❖ Challenges Identified:

- Coordinating collection and timely arrival of all donated packets.
- Covering different areas of Galle efficiently to reach those in need.
- Ensuring the food remained warm and presentable during distribution.

❖ Solutions Implemented:

- All members brought their contributions to a single meeting point before distribution.
- Members who volunteered split into small teams to cover multiple areas simultaneously.

❖ Contribution from Leo Club Members:

Each participating member played an active role: donating meals, bringing packets to the meeting point, and distributing the food. Their combined effort ensured that every individual received not only a meal but also a moment of care and compassion.

❖ Conclusion:

Path of Harvest successfully provided warmth and nourishment to homeless individuals while fostering unity, empathy, and community responsibility among members of the club.

Description

The Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College, together with the Leo Club of Rahula College, carried out a heartfelt community service initiative titled Path of Harvest. The project focused on providing warm, nourishing meals to homeless individuals across the Galle and Matara town areas. Members from both clubs worked side by side to prepare and distribute food, ensuring that those often overlooked received support, kindness, and a moment of comfort.

As teams moved through streets, bus stands, marketplaces, and familiar gathering spots, they offered not just meals, but genuine smiles and meaningful conversations. The Initiative fostered an atmosphere of care and empathy, bringing youth volunteers together in a powerful show of unity and service. Path of Harvest not only helped ease hunger, but also reminded everyone of the dignity and humanity each person deserves.
