● About the Project

"Nila Diyawara" is the first service initiative by the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College in month of April. The project aimed to reclaim and restore neglected public wells. Conducted in two phases, the project successfully restored two vital public wells. These wells had become unusable due to mud and debris accumulated over time. The project returned them to the communities as safe and useful assets.

1. Project Objective

The main goal of "Nila Diyawara" was to revive two public wells in despair and turn them into safe, useful assets. This would provide local communities with reliable, safe access to water for bathing. By reviving these existing assets, the project ensured a safe, secure water supply.

2. Project Description

➤ Community Need / Requirement:

The public wells in Welawatta and Yakkalamulla had fallen into disrepair. They were filled with debris, stagnant water, and thick mud, making them unhygienic for the community to use for washing or bathing. Neglect had turned these once useful wells into wasted assets.

➤ Project Selection / Idea Generation:

The project was selected because we noticed that this existing infrastructure was sitting completely unused due to its poor condition. Reviving a neglected public resource would provide a direct, sustainable, and permanent benefit to the community.

➤ Planning and Execution:

Phase 01 (Welawatta - April 11, 2026): We cleared surface debris, emptied and deep-cleaned the well, and painted the surrounding structures to protect the well and provide a clean look.

Phase 02 (Yakkalamulla - April 20, 2026): Following the successful first phase, We restored a second site in Yakkalamulla, removing deep silt deposits, cleaning the interior, and painting it for public use. During the process, a local resident, moved by our dedication, generously volunteered his personal JCB and his own time to assist.

➤ Challenges Identified:

The main challenge was removing the hard mud layers at the bottom of the well. Years of neglect had created thick layers of silt and compacted debris that were difficult to extract by hand. The stagnant nature of the water required the removal of water for thorough cleaning and restoration, which required significant amount of hard work.

➤ Solutions Implemented:

To address the heavy silt and pollution, our members manually removed the thick layers of mud and debris. For this, we used brushes to vigorously scrub the walls, removing all the slime and stains. A volunteer used a JCB to clear overgrown brush and debris around the well. Finally, to finish it off and make it more pleasant, we painted the exterior walls, and let the well to be refilled with natural water flow.

➤ Contribution from Leo Club Members:

This was an effort directly contributed by our members. From scrubbing the interior with brushes to painting the surrounding structures, members contributed to all aspects of the restoration. The success of this project was due to their extensive efforts.

3. Conclusion:

Project "Nila Diyawara" has successfully restored two vital public assets that were previously being lost to neglect. By cleaning out years of silt and mud, and repainting the sites, we have ensured that the communities in Welawatta and Yakkalamulla have access to clean and functional wells once again.

Description

The Watawatua Public Well is a vital community resource for washing, bathing, etc. It had fallen into complete disrepair, filled with debris, trash, mud, and stagnant water. It had become an unsightly and unsafe public asset. We launched 'Nila Dewanna - Phase 01' with the objective of reviving this neglected well and restoring a safe, clean water source for the local community.

On April 13, 2026, we executed a step-by-step restoration effort. The main challenge that we encountered was deep, compacted silt accumulated inside the well. First, we cleared the surface and completely emptied the well's interior. Club members directly contributed to every aspect of the labor by extracting the mud, vigorously scrubbing the interior walls with brushes to remove algae and debris, and finally painting the the well and its surrounding belonging to fix protect the well and provide a finished look.

We allowed the natural water flow of the well to fill the well back up with clean, pure water. The Watawatua public well is now a clean, functional, hygienic public asset beneficial for the community.

Description

The Yakkalamulla public well is an ancient water source that had fallen into severe neglect. It was completely hidden by overgrown vegetation and threatened with stagnant water and mud. We launched "Nila Dynamada - Phase 02" with the objective of reviving this lost infrastructure and returning a safe, reliable water source to the community.

On April 20, 2026, following the success of our first phase, we initiated the restoration effort. The main challenge was the heavy overgrowth and deep silt accumulation. A local resident generously provided a KES 100 to clear the surrounding brush and debris. Following this, club members (15) contributed to manually extracting the stagnant water and mud, vigorously scrubbing the interior walls, and painting the structure to give it a clean look and a final polish.

Then, we allowed the well to naturally refill with clean water. The Yakkalamulla public well is now a fully restored, accessible, and regulated public asset that once again serves the needs of the local community.
