● About the Project

"Youth to the Elderly" brought joy, comfort, and nourishment to the residents of Bona Vista Elders' Home. Our members acknowledged the emotional isolation faced by senior citizens and spent the evening providing companionship, culminating in a warm, nutritious dinner for all.

1. Project Objective

The primary objective was to fulfill the basic need of food for the residents of the elders' home. This was done by providing a wholesome and nourishing meal to them. We also aimed to provide emotional comfort to the elders living there, therefore cultivating respect, empathy and social responsibility among our members.

2. Project Description

➤ Community Need / Requirement:

The program aimed to make elderly individuals feel integral to the community, maintaining their dignity and well-being. While their physical needs are addressed, senior citizens often lack consistent emotional support and connection with the younger generation. There was a clear need to enrich the lives of these senior adults through conversation and care that breaks the monotony of their daily routine.

➤ Project Selection / Idea Generation:

We chose this project to help with the physical and emotional needs of the residents. We wanted to spend real time with the seniors, combining a traditional alms-giving with a social visit so we could provide a meal and some much-needed company at the same time.

➤ Planning and Execution:

On April 17, 2026, Centennial Leo Club members arrived at the Bona Vista Elders' Home. The execution was split into two phases. First, our members sat with the residents, engaged in conversations, listened to their life experiences, and shared stories. Then, Leos arranged the dinner served dinner to each resident, followed by dessert.

➤ Challenges Identified:

The main challenge was picking a menu that everyone could actually eat, keeping in mind things like dietary needs and how easy the food was to chew. We also had to work hard to get some of the more quiet residents to open up and talk with us.

➤ Solutions Implemented:

We talked to the staff at the home to make sure the menu was safe and healthy. We also made sure our members knew to take their time and really listen to the elders instead of rushing the conversations.

➤ Contribution from Leo Club Members:

Our members handled everything from raising the money and transporting the food to serving the dinner and cleaning up the hall afterward. Most importantly, they spent their evening just sitting and talking with the residents.

3. Conclusion:

Youth to the Elderly" successfully provided the residents of Bona Vista Elders' Home with a day of much-needed companionship and a healthy dinner. By spending time listening to their stories and personally serving the meal, our members helped brighten the residents' routine and showed them they are valued by the younger generation.

Description ⓘ
Many elderly residents in care homes face social isolation, often feeling forgotten by the younger generation. This lack of interaction can lead to deep loneliness. We launched "Youth to the Elderly" at the Bona Vista Elders' Home to provide nutritional support through a Dinner Aims and to spend a meaningful evening with the residents.

On April 26, 2026, our club members visited the home to prepare and serve a dinner. The main challenge was breaking the silence and encouraging the residents to open up about their lives. Our members spent the entire evening with them.

The project was a deeply moving experience for both the Leos and the elders. By combining a nutritious meal with genuine companionship, we were able to lift the spirits of the residents and remind them that they are valued and respected. It was a successful evening of building strong, emotional bonds between generations.
