ABSTRACT

The objective of the Danumata Sawiyak project was to support students affected by harsh weather conditions by providing essential educational resources such as books and stationery, helping them continue their studies without interruption. The project aimed to restore and strengthen their educational opportunities through community donations, while fostering collaboration between the Leo Club of Baddegama and the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College in addressing an urgent educational need.

PROJECT NEED ASSESSMENT

Benefiting Community	The benefiting community of the Danumata Sawiyak project includes students affected by harsh weather condition, Ditwah who faced disruptions in their education due to lack of essential learning resources. These students mainly come from economically challenged backgrounds in affected regions, where access to books, stationery, and other educational materials is limited. The project indirectly supported a large number of students through the donation of nearly 2000 books along with stationery items. The resources were ultimately handed over to the University of Peradeniya, ensuring distribution to deserving students in need.
Identified Community Need	The key community need identified was the lack of access to essential educational resources among students affected by adverse environmental conditions. Many students were unable to continue their studies effectively due to the unavailability of textbooks, past papers, and learning materials. This created a significant gap in their academic progress and limited their opportunities for success. Addressing this issue became crucial to support their educational continuity and uplift their future prospects.
Service Opportunity	The situation created an opportunity to organize a community-based donation drive to collect educational materials such as books, notes, and stationery from well-wishers. The presence of strong networks within the Leo Club of Baddegama and the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College provided a platform to mobilize resources efficiently. Local community members, school students, and families contributed generously, while members' residences were used as collection centers. Additionally, support from personal connections, including volunteers who assisted in transportation and coordination, helped in effectively meeting the identified needs. The Danumata Sawiyak project was selected because it directly addressed an urgent and impactful need within the community—supporting education. Education is a fundamental requirement for long-term development, and by providing necessary resources, the project aimed to create a lasting positive impact. The collaborative nature of the project between two Leo Clubs also strengthened its reach and effectiveness, making it a meaningful and practical initiative.
Mode of Data Collection	The information regarding the community need was gathered primarily through observations, discussions, and interactions within the community and through Leo Club networks. Insights were also obtained through informal communication with affected individuals and community members. Additionally, support and coordination were facilitated through trusted personal and organizational connections, which helped in identifying beneficiaries and ensuring proper distribution of resources.

Project Objective	The objective of the Danumata Sawiyak project was to support students affected by harsh weather conditions by providing essential educational resources such as books and stationery, helping them continue their studies without interruption. The project aimed to restore and strengthen their educational opportunities through community donations, while fostering collaboration between the Leo Club of Baddegama and the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College in addressing an urgent educational need.
Project Description	The Danumata Sawiyak project was initiated with the aim of supporting students who were severely affected by harsh weather condition, Ditwah and were struggling to continue their education. This project was to help revive their lost educational dreams by providing essential books and learning materials. This initiative was jointly organized by the Leo Club of Baddegama and the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College, Galle, as a collaborative community service project dedicated to educational upliftment. The idea for the project was generated from the urgent need observed within affected communities where students lacked basic educational resources due to environmental hardships. Recognizing this issue, both Leo Clubs came together to create an opportunity for the public to contribute through donations of books and stationery items. The project was officially launched on 1st December 2025, and donation collection was carried out until 15th February 2026. During this period, collection centers were established at two main locations: the residence of Leo Narmada of the Leo Club of Baddegama in the Dunwatte area, and the residence of Leo Mevinu of the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College in the Heenpandala area of Galle. Both members, along with their families, voluntarily supported the initiative, enabling donors from different regions to contribute conveniently. These donations mainly included a wide range of educational materials such as textbooks, past papers books, resource books, notes, tutes, and other learning materials, amounting to nearly 2000 books in total. In addition to books, a considerable quantity of stationery items was also received. All donations were carefully sorted and categorized according to their type to ensure proper distribution and maximum usefulness for the beneficiaries.

The success of the donation drive was further strengthened by the dedicated efforts of the project chair from the Leo Club of Baddegama, Leo Hasini, who worked tirelessly to collect a significant number of books. Her initiative extended to engaging her schoolmates, who also generously contributed a large number of educational materials. As a new Leo, she demonstrated exceptional commitment and did an outstanding job in carrying out her responsibilities.

Throughout the collection phase, the project received strong community support, with many individuals donating educational materials generously. A key part of the process involved the safe transportation of donations from Baddegama to Galle (Leo Mevinu's place), which was made possible with the valuable assistance of Leo Anushka Liyanage, who helped transport the collected items. This ensured smooth coordination between the two Leo Club divisions. After the completion of the donation collection period, all received items were carefully sorted and categorized based on type, ensuring proper organization for distribution.

Several challenges were encountered during the execution of the project, including managing the large volume of donations received over the collection period and ensuring proper classification of educational materials. Coordinating transportation between Baddegama and Galle also required effective planning and teamwork. These challenges were successfully overcome through strong collaboration between Leo Club members, efficient communication, and the dedicated support of members who assisted in logistics and transport arrangements.

The final phase of the project involved the formal handover of the collected educational resources to the University of Peradeniya on 9th March 2026. This was facilitated through a trusted connection via Leo Mevinu's family network, where his mother's work colleague, an undergraduate of the University of Sri Jayewardenepura, voluntarily took the responsibility of transporting the large volume of donations to the University of Peradeniya without any personal benefit. This act of generosity was a special highlight of the project, ensuring safe and reliable delivery of resources to the beneficiaries. With this final handover, the project was successfully concluded.

Overall, the Danumata Sawiyak project stood as a meaningful collaborative effort between the Leo Club of Baddegama and the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College, Galle. It successfully mobilized community support, ensured proper collection and distribution of educational resources, and made a positive impact on the educational opportunities of underprivileged students affected by harsh weather conditions.

The post-project feedback received from beneficiaries and coordinators was highly positive, with appreciation expressed for the timely support and meaningful contribution towards restoring educational opportunities for affected students. Donors and Leo members also appreciated the transparency, organization, and effective coordination throughout the project.

The sustainability of the project lies in its strong community engagement and collaborative model between the Leo Club of Baddegama and the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College. The established donation network and teamwork framework can be reused for future initiatives, ensuring continued support for similar educational or social needs in the future.

දැනුම් සවිස්ත

April 10, 2026

"දැනුම් සවිස්ත" is one of the most meaningful initiatives carried out jointly by the Leo Club of Baddegama and Leo Club of Richmond College. The project was launched in response to the severe impact of Cyclonic Storm Ditwah, which caused significant damage across many parts of Sri Lanka. Among the most affected were school children who lost their books, stationery, and essential learning materials. To support these students and ensure their education could continue without interruption, Leos collected a substantial amount of donations, including books, pens, and various educational supplies. This initiative not only provided much-needed assistance but also reflected the true spirit of service.

"දැනුම් සවිස්ත" clearly demonstrated the unity, teamwork, and commitment of the Leos and the community. By coming together during a time of hardship, they offered hope, relief, and a strong message of compassion to the children and families who needed it most.
