01. About the Project

01) Project Objective

Project Tide of Hope was initiated by the Centennial Leo Club of Richmond College to support families affected by recent floods in Sri Lanka. The project aimed to collect and deliver essential relief items, including dry rations, water, medicine, and educational materials, to provide immediate assistance, restore a measure of comfort, and extend hope to those impacted by the disaster.

02) Project Description

❖ Community Need / Requirement:

The recent floods in affected regions created urgent hardship for many families, disrupting access to food, clean water, medicine, hygiene materials, and daily necessities.

Many flood-affected individuals lacked basic relief items, and there was a pressing need for rapid humanitarian aid to address immediate shortages of essentials. The flood impact made normal supply chains unpredictable, leaving vulnerable families especially exposed.

Given this context, the club recognized that donation drives offering food, water, medical supplies, and educational materials could provide immediate relief, helping families survive short-term shortages and offset some of the stress and loss caused by the floods.

❖ Project Selection / Idea Generation:

Recognizing the urgent need among flood-affected communities, club decided to organize a relief drive, in order to collect essential goods they could gather.

❖ Planning and Execution:

Collection Period & Handover: The donation drive took place over two days, 29th and 30th of November, with the handover of collected items on 30th.

Donors: Donations came from club members and their parents.

Items Collected: A broad variety of essentials was gathered, including dry rations (rice, dhal, sugar, noodles, biscuits), water bottles, medical, hygiene products (soap, toothpaste, balm), canned food, and educational materials (used and new school textbooks and exercise books).

Handover: On the 30th, the packed supplies were handed over to the relevant authorities responsible for flood-relief distribution.

Target Beneficiaries: Based on estimates, the relief items were intended to support roughly 150 individuals impacted by the floods.

❖ Challenges Identified:

- Ensuring that enough essential items were collected to meaningfully help those affected.
- Coordinating collection of donations from different donors within a short time frame.
- Sorting out items received.
- Ensuring fairness and appropriateness of donated items
- Matching relief items with actual needs on the ground.

❖ Solutions Implemented:

- The club relied on immediate internal mobilisation: club members and parents contributed, which eliminated the need for outside fundraising or procurement under pressure.
- All contributions were gathered and consolidated quickly so that sorting and packing could begin without delay.

❖ Contribution from Leo Club Members:

Leo Club members actively contributed to the project by donating essential items and taking part in sorting and organizing all collected supplies. Their efforts ensured that the relief materials were ready for timely handover.

❖ Conclusion:

Tide of Hope provided immediate relief to approximately 150 flood-affected individuals through the collection and distribution of essential supplies. The project showcased the commitment, coordination, and active participation of Leo Club members
